

This meant that whereas on AWACS he was opposed to the administration, on the MX, he might be the administration's point man. I just put the idea in his head. With a freshman congressman you can't push. You can only position yourself. You want press people to think of him as a possible interview. And he does give a hell of an interview."

He gave speech after Reagan to Nation of Alliance of Businessmen. He wan't loose and gave technical speech. But it was one of more important ones. He talked about trying to get Dan to focus on a speech. Sometimes he has to beat on him to make him concentrate. He's good at it and gets "cocky". His wife doesn't think he does well with prepared texts either.

He walks press releases around to gallerys; he send them over computer to the Indianapolis computer in the office and they walk them to state press gallery. And they send release to 8 Indiana papers in services by telecopier. Can have press release out in 45 minutes. "Faster than any office on the Hill."
