Dear Mr. Eastman:

A seventy-fifth birthday is an event! The Times, of Wednesday, gave me the information that you were to celebrate your 75th birthday today, so I could not refrain from sending you my heartfelt congratulations and best wishes for... many happy returns of the day, you have every reason to feel happy on this eventful day dear Mr. Eastman!

Hoping you may accept my delayed good wishes in the spirit in which they are sent.

Believe me most cordially yours, Katy B. Hofheinz

Dear Mr. Eastman:

The editorial in the New York Times of this morning advises me that this is your seventy-fifth birthday and it prompted me to send you the following telegram:

"Please accept my heartiest congratulations, not so much on having reached 75 years, but largely because those years have been crowded so full of accomplishments which have been a blessing to mankind the world over. May you have many happy returns of the day!"

You will, doubtless, receive hundreds of congratulatory messages, but few will come from any one who has developed a higher appreciation for your accomplishments as a manufacturer and an influence for good - both directly and indirectly in helping to solve the social problems of the World-at-Large and particularly those social problems that come directly before you as a large employer or labor, than from
