

He's rethinking his position on tuition tax credits. I nearly died when I heard that. The public school teachers were good to him. They'll drop him immediately. There's no way he can get the support of the catholics--not with his stand on abortion. They won't support him. He's got to decide what his electoral base is and stay with them. He has to cut his deals. I'll be with you; I'll expect you to be with me. The news are not enough. He needs the teachers. On all the polls, ADA, ACA, he comes out around 50%. I'm afraid he'll end up without any electoral base... But he has to take positions he's comfortable with. He's very good at rationalizing."

me rethink

*5-10-82
franked by [unclear]
in my 9m back to [unclear] for my [unclear]*