

here at one time. Domenici not here too much; a couple of toll calls intervene. I left early, when it appeared that even Metzenbaum was not all that enthused. The message seems clear. The committee really isn't interested in listening to Regan much now. He won't concentrate on deficit and that's what budget committee is most concerned about. The Republicans on the Committee met in PD's office with Regan before the hearing--so whatever message there was got communicated then. I think message was: get businessmen to tell President what they tell us.
